DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 4 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. In particular, in claims 4 and 6 , " the electronic component " is vague, as to which of the two components reference is being made to.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ma in view of either of Izawa et al or Ohsaka et al. Ma teaches an internal combustion engine management system which has a pre-cycle warm up routine for a device such as glow plugs. Ma does not directly sense the temperature of the device to be heated up but rather makes an estimate of temperature based on the elapsed time from engine shutoff to restart. Ma also states in the background that it is possible to directly sense the device to be heated up but that such temperature sensors are unreliable.

Both of Izawa et al and Ohsaka et al teach an overheat protection circuit which monitors the temperature of a driver (power MOSFET). If the temperature is higher than a predetermined amount the driver is stopped or limited from driving the load device. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have used a driver temperature monitoring circuit as taught by either of Izawa et al or Ohsaka et al in pre-cycle warm-up device as taught by Ma because this would have provided a safety feature for preventing the driver from "burning out" due to overheating. Furthermore, whether the temperature sensed is absolute or a differential is considered to be an obvious matter of design choice. The pre cycle warming up of fuel injectors is already known as disclosed by applicant's background of the invention and Ma's device could have been used for pre cycle warm up of injectors.
